Good news for students interested in studying abroad: This year a number of German universities, research and funding institutions are visiting New Delhi (18-19 February) and Hyderabad (21-23 February) as part of the German Study & Research Expo India 2017. Germany has seen a record growth in the number of Indians studying and doing research in Germany. In the past five years, this number has more than doubled. Germany welcomes bright minds from all over the world.

Ahead of the Expo, German Ambassador to India, Dr Martin Ney, said: “Germany, the ‘Land of Ideas’, is a leading science nation that excels in research and development. So far, German scientists have received 80 Nobel prizes for their achievements. Germany is home to some of the oldest and best universities in the world. Germany offers excellent career opportunities for foreign graduates. Ambitious and talented young students from India are most welcome in Germany.”

The Expo is aimed specifically at graduates and postgraduates and will present an excellent platform for one-on-one exchanges between students and experts. It will be open to all and will give visitors the opportunity to have an in-depth interaction with professors and representatives of German universities. Visitors will also have the opportunity to attend seminars on topics such as engineering studies, management studies, natural science studies, campus life, employment prospects and many more.

The Director of the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD), Heike Mock, stated: “German universities with their top quality education, excellent research atmosphere and cultural ethos have struck a chord with international students.
